Man arrested for hitting another man with crowbar

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A man was arrested over the weekend for allegedly hitting another man on the head with a crowbar in a fit of rage.

Over the weekend, Lucky Michael Chipuelong was arrested for allegedly hitting another man's head and body multiple times with a crowbar. Due to the alleged assault, the victim sustained a 3-inch laceration on the head.

Chipuelong, 36, has since been charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, and disturbing the peace.

During his bail hearing last Monday before Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho, a $10,000 cash bail was imposed on Chipuelong.

After the bail hearing, Chipuelong was remanded back to Department of Corrections' custody and was ordered to return to court for a preliminary hearing on April 17 while his arraignment was set for April 22.

According to court documents, the victim told police that he was drinking with another person at an apartment in San Antonio when Chipuelong approached him with a crowbar and began hitting him on his head and body.

The victim added he and Chipuelong had known each other for more than 10 years, and he was surprised by the attack.

Police said the victim complained of severe pain in his left rib area and a bad headache during an interview in the emergency room of the hospital.

Chipuelong, for his part, told investigators that he was angry at a friend for using money to buy beer for the victim instead of buying food for his kids.

He said he wanted to teach the two men a lesson so he took out his anger on the victim. He also admitted using a crowbar to hit the victim.

A witness told police that Chipuelong walked up the ## Victim in assault case vs. Rep. Camacho unavailable for trial

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
REPORTER

The bench trial for Rep. Vicente Camacho (D-Saipan), whose trial was initially set for July 2023, has been moved again, this time because the victim is reportedly unavailable due to health issues.

Camacho's trial date has been moved anew based on recent developments in his ongoing criminal case.

The development, court documents state, is that the victim—Steven Koch—is in the U.S. mainland for treatment after he was diagnosed with pulmonary embolism with deep vein thrombosis.

During a pre-trial conference last March 26, Superior Court Associate Judge Kenneth Govendo ordered the prosecution to file an official motion to move the victim in the case against Camacho—Steven Koch—unavailable for trial before the trial date which was last April 8.

Last Monday, the prosecution, headed by Chief Criminal Prosecutor Chester Hinds, filed its motion asking that the court declare Koch unavailable for trial and asked that the court allow the prosecution to introduce non-testimonial hearsay statements of the victim instead.

"Sometime in 2022, Mr. Koch's health began to fail. He has had health issues in the past. Mr. Koch went to the states to confirm if these issues were returning. While in the states Mr. Koch was diagnosed with a pulmonary embolism with deep vein thrombosis. In a letter from

CPA, Air Force to host community day this weekend

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
REPORTER

Before bidding the CNMI adieu, the U.S. Air Force servicemen who have been on Saipan for the past week pursuant to the annual Agile Reaper exercise will be hosting a community day this Saturday in collaboration with the Commonwealth Ports Authority.

The upcoming community day, set for Saturday, April 13, will give members of the community a chance to ask servicemen questions about the recent exercises, the capabilities of the jets used during the exercise, and to take a look inside.

According to a press release from CPA, the community day event will be from 10am to 4pm with the entrance gates closing by 3:30pm. Entrance will be at the gate located south of the Departure Terminal.

Parking will be available in the main parking lot or on the grassy areas across from the entrance.

"Please provide a valid Photo ID to sign in before entering. Parents and guardians would be able to vouch and remain responsible for their children upon entering. We advise the public to bring your own umbrella, and that there are no restrooms available during this event. Upon entering, please remain within the coned designated areas and kindly cooperate with the staff and military personnel during this event," said CPA.

suit, he alleges violation of his civil rights, denied access to federally funded programs, public humiliation, mental anguish, pain and suffering, false allegations/slander, attempted false arrest, extortionist threats, and retaliation.

"Since 2018-2019, NMC-SBDC has denied me access to education opportunities and access to federally funded programs and service.

These denials have caused me financial, emotional, mental, and physical suffering and hardship not only to myself, but my business and my children," he claims.

The court has yet to rule on whether Zajradhara may proceed with his suit in forma pauperis, without a fee.

Last April 1, NMC, through attorney Mark Scoggins, filed for a temporary restraining order and permanent injunction against Zajradhara for harassing SBDC employees since 2022.

Specifically, NMC wants the court to prohibit Zajradhara from communicating with the SBDC or its employees by any method and for any reason, and from coming within 500 yards of the SBDC or any of its events.

In addition, NMC is suing Zajradhara in Superior Court for undetermined damages to be proven at trial.

The reason NMC has taken legal action against Zajradhara, the lawsuit said, is because SBDC and its employees have suffered emotional injury due to his conduct, damage to their reputations, and have been forced to spend an inordinate amount of time and energy dealing with his abusive and harassing conduct.

According to the lawsuit, Scoggins explains that Zajradhara, for years, has tried to extract funds from entities by accusing them of discrimination.

access to high-speed internet. Proa is a traditional sailing vessel symbolic of the CNMI's local culture and heritage.

According to the Office of the Governor, the introduction of Proa signifies a leap into the future of digital infrastructure, ensuring that the CNMI remains at the forefront of technological innovation.

Under the project, a subsea cable will be laid down from Japan to the CNMI. It's the first cable that is a direct connection as all other fiber lines come from Guam.

As of press time yesterday, Saipan Tribune was still trying to get information from the Office of the Governor as to how much the Proa project will cost the CNMI.

Palacios said this fiber optic cable project is more than just an infrastructural development, it is a beacon of progress, offering CNMI residents improved access to educational resources, healthcare services, and global markets. "It paves the way for economic growth, enhances disaster resilience, and solidifies the CNMI's position in the digital age," Palacios said.

The governor extended the Commonwealth's deepest gratitude to Google for the company's collaboration and to everyone involved in making this vision a reality.

He said the Proa project is a shining example of what can be achieved when innovation meets determination and is but one in a series of future subsea connections the CNMI anticipates in the next few years.

Glen Hunter, who is the special assistant for the Broadband Policy and Development Office, stated that what seemed impossible became a tangible reality through unwavering focus and dedication.

Hunter said prior to the governor's intervention, the dream of achieving such advanced connectivity was just that—a dream.

passed the bill with Senate amendments during an emergency session yesterday morning.

Apatang informed the Legislature that he signed House Bill No. 23-104, HD1, SD1, into Public Law No. 23-18.

Palacios said in a statement that he is glad that the Legislature acted swiftly and decisively in passing the bill that would allow the continuation of payment of the 25% pension benefits to retirees.

Palacios said since the beginning of this administration, he and Apatang have been committed to continuing the 25% pension payments to the retirees.

He said they thanked the House and Senate members for their work in expediting the passage of the legislation, which also demonstrates the Legislature's efforts to ensure the financial security of many individuals who have dedicated their careers to public service.

Palacios reiterated his previous statement that the leaders of the CNMI bear a collective obligation to safeguard the retirees' benefits and give them the financial peace of mind they deserve.

"The legislation sends a clear message to our retirees: we value your service, and we will continue to work together to protect our retirees' livelihoods," Palacios said.

With all 17 House members present during an emergency session voting "yes," House Speaker Edmund S. Villagomez (Ind-Saipan) said the House accepts the Senate's amendments and because of that House Bill No. 23-104, HD1, SD1, hereby passes the House.

Rep. Joseph Flores (Ind-Saipan) did not vote as he is a retiree, Saipan Tribune learned.

Reps. Denita K. Yantemai (D-Saipan) and Roy Christopher A. Ada (R-Saipan) were absent but excused from the session.

The Friends of the Arts wishes to announce the completion of the recent visit by internationally renowned classical pianist Roman Rudnytsky to Saipan and present him with our thanks for the generosity of his time and skills to our community.

During his visit, the Saipan community was able to enjoy two special concerts—a rare opportunity to listen to live classical music played by a master pianist.

During his two-week visit to Saipan, he also traveled to many of the CNMI's schools, playing and discussing music with the students. This is Rudnytsky's 13th trip to the CNMI. The Friends of the Arts, with the help of sponsors from the community, hosted Rudnytsky's stay.

Fired firefighters file federal suit vs. ex-finance chief

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES

REPORTER

The firefighters who were terminated for refusing to get vaccinated for COVID-19 have recently filed a federal lawsuit against former Department of Finance secretary David DLG. Atalig over premium pay they were entitled to.

Last Tuesday, the nine firefighters who were terminated back in 2021 for refusing to get COVID-19 vaccinated filed a lawsuit against Atalig over the premium pay they claim they are entitled to for working during the height of the Covid-19 pandemic.

The plaintiffs are Paul T. Acebedo, Jose K. Angui, Allen T. Calvo, Cain C. Castro, Argernon A. Flores, Derek B. Gersonde, Shawn DLR. Kaipat, Philip M. Kalen, and Adam J. Safer.

The plaintiffs' attorney, Joseph Horey, claims that his clients were deprived their civil rights when they were not given the full $5,000 premium benefit all first responders were entitled to during the pandemic.

Specifically, the plaintiffs claim they were only given $1,000 in premium pay.

"Defendant's actions in approving less than the full $5,000 amount of premium pay for plaintiffs were without rational basis, and deprived plaintiff of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed to them by the 14th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, as applicable to the CNMI via the Covenant, and actionable pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. 13. Defendant's actions were taken under color of CNMI law," said Horey.

As relief, the plaintiffs want to be paid damages in the amount of the unpaid balance of premium pay due each plaintiff, incidental and consequential damages in an amount to be proved at trial, costs for filing the lawsuit, and attorney's fees.

According to the lawsuit, on or about Dec. 29, 2021, former governor Ralph DLG Torres announced that the Department of Finance would release premium pay for CNMI government employees who had worked at least 40 hours to directly mitigate the COVID-19 pandemic.

"According to the announcement, CNMI government employees who had worked on the front lines of the pandemic for at least 40 hours in directly mitigating COVID-19, such as providing prevention, response, preparedness, and recovery services, would receive $5,000 in premium pay," said the lawsuit.

Each of the plaintiffs, as DFEMS employees, had worked at least 40 hours to directly mitigate the COVID-19 pandemic, said the lawsuit.

"Each of the plaintiffs filled out, and submitted to the Department of Finance, their respective applications for premium pay. Although each of the plaintiffs met all the qualifications for premium pay in the amount of $5,000, [Atalig] approved premium pay for each of them in the amount of $1,000 rather than the full $5,000," said the lawsuit.

The plaintiffs claim that Atalig decided arbitrarily that resigned, terminated, and inactive frontline employees would receive premium pay in the amount of $1,000 only.

"Plaintiffs, who were no longer employed by the Commonwealth government at the time premium pay was issued, were therefore paid less than full premium pay, notwithstanding the fact that they had already performed the amount of direct pandemic mitigation work required to qualify for full premium payment," they argued.

Health care is still too costly for Americans

America's approach to health care is an outlier among the world's rich countries, and not in a good way. Extraordinarily complex and hideously expensive, it still manages to leave some 26 million people without coverage. The Affordable Care Act of 2010 made notable progress, but failed to solve the pressing problems of high costs and less-than-universal access.

The ACA fell short partly because legislators dropped the so-called public option. This idea should be revived. The dysfunction in Washington makes such innovation difficult at the federal level, but states have been trying variants. These experiments are worth watching.

The need for more reform is clear. The U.S. spends about 17% of gross domestic product on health care, half as much again as comparable countries—yet on many metrics, including life expectancy, U.S. outcomes are worse. The system's enormous cost is partly hidden because most Americans are insured through their employers: The premiums suppress wages, so the true hit to families' finances is disguised. Even covered employees can be on the hook for additional charges, enough in some cases to pay for a small car.

Workers fear that losing their jobs will mean they lose their insurance too. More than half of the 20 million who've signed up for Obamacare in 2024 complain of high monthly costs and out-of-pocket spending. And despite the ACA, roughly 10% of Americans still have no coverage at all.

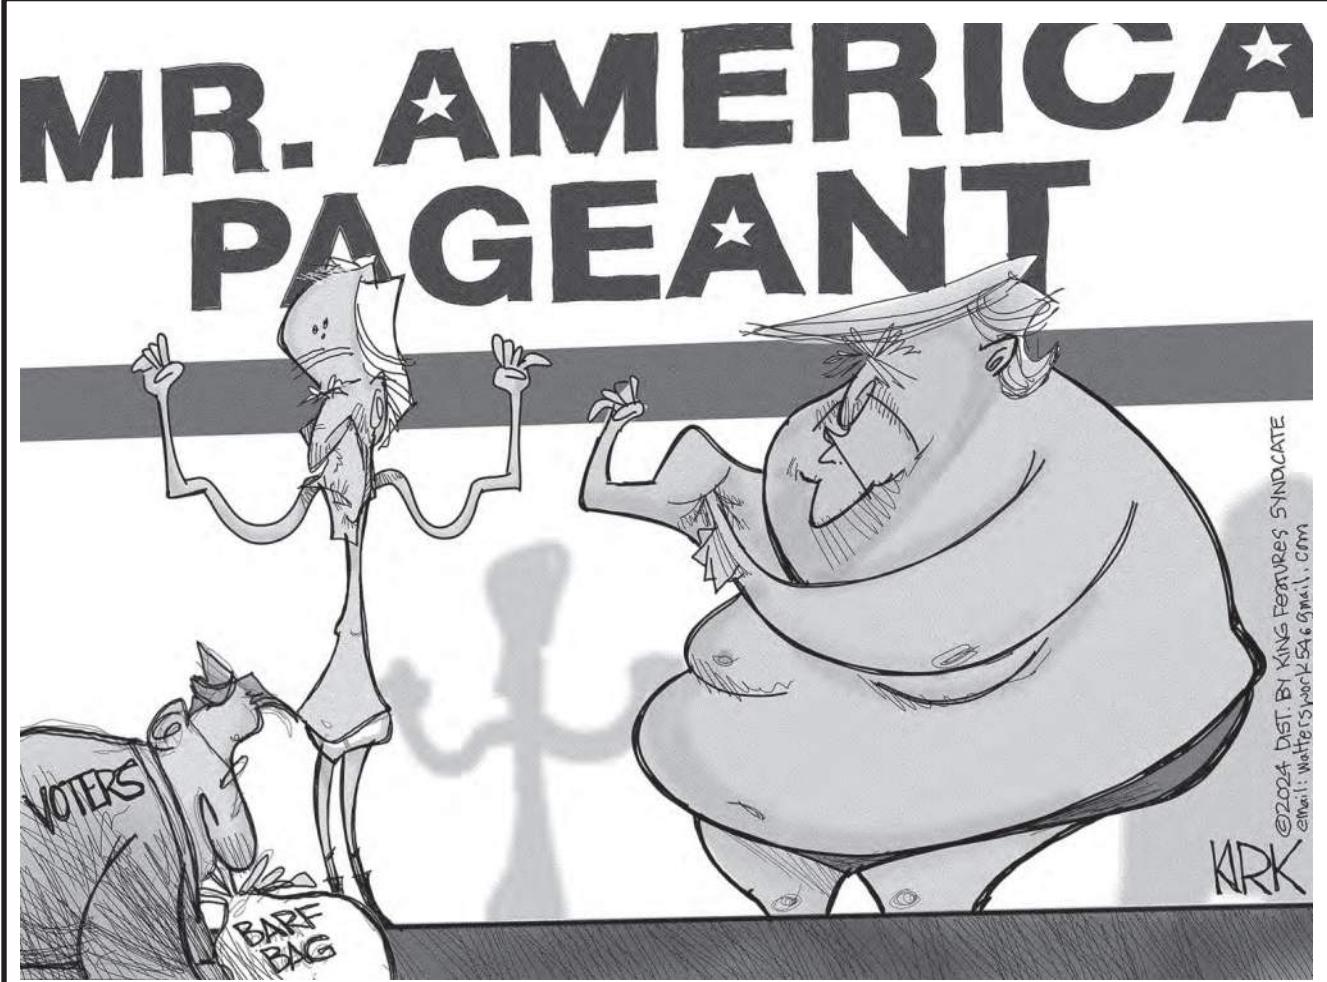

When Obamacare was taking shape, some lawmakers envisioned a public option—a government-run plan that would compete alongside private insurance. Like Medicare, it would save money by negotiating prices and cutting costs. Voters liked the idea, but it met stiff industry opposition and was ultimately scrapped. During his presidential campaign a decade later, Joe Biden supported a public option, but his administration has focused on other ways to make health care more affordable.

Yet the public option wasn't quite dead: As a result of the ACA, states have been able to try "innovative strategies" to lower costs and broaden coverage. Three have used it to advance programs they're calling public options, and a handful of others have plans underway.

Colorado's scheme is especially popular, thanks to generous benefits (including free primary and mental-health care) and lower premiums than many marketplace plans. State law requires insurers to meet annual premium-reduction targets, and the insurers negotiate hard with hospitals to cut costs. If they miss the targets, insurers and providers alike can be summoned to public hearings. The state has also introduced a reinsurance program to defray the cost of expensive claims.

Admittedly, schemes like Colorado's depart from the original public-option idea, which relies on competition from a gradually expanding Medicare, not price controls. The old-school public option still has a lot to recommend it: Use Medicare's systems and provider network to gradually extend affordable coverage—with premiums set to recover full actuarial costs, offset by ACA subsidies for eligible households. A plan called Medicare-X, championed by Senators Michael Bennet and Tim Kaine, would

Biden had words with Bibi over Israel's apocalyptic Gaza war. Only action will do

It's a shame upon shame that it took the deaths of six foreigners in Gaza, humanitarian workers for the U.S.-based World Central Kitchen, to finally, maybe, shake President Biden to reconsider his acquiescence—his complicity—in Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's apocalyptic war there.

By the time the convoy from chef José Andrés' organization was annihilated by an Israeli drone strike last week—killing three Brits, a Pole, an Australian and a Canadian American, along with a Palestinian driver—nearly 33,000 Gazans were dead after six months of Israel's pummeling, two-thirds of them women and children. More than a million more Gazans, half the strip's population, have been displaced. Most of those refugees have targets on their backs, crowded as they are around Rafah, Gaza's southernmost city, which Netanyahu says is next in his sights despite Biden's talk of "red lines."

There are two more casualties of Netanyahu's war. The first is the global goodwill toward Israel in the immediate aftermath of Oct. 7, when Hamas terrorists from Gaza savagely murdered 1,200 Israelis and took more than 240 hostages, many of whom remain in Hamas' hands. And the second: the international standing of the United States, given Biden's seemingly unquestioning support to date of Israel's right-wing government.

That support is no longer unquestioned, at least. Not since Biden's reportedly tense call with Netanyahu on Thursday in which we're told the president demanded that Israel take "specific, concrete and measurable steps" to alleviate civilian suffering and deaths in Gaza. U.S. policy hinges on Israel's response, Biden told the prime minister. Also, Israel must agree soon to another hostage exchange with Hamas. For the first time, Biden called for "an immediate cease-fire."

Still, so far Biden's words remain just that, words—which the self-regarding Netanyahu will likely dismiss to survive atop his extremist coalition.

For months "Bibi" has snubbed Biden's admonitions to show restraint, to negotiate a hostage swap, to avoid a major assault on Rafah and to stop inhibiting the flow of humanitarian aid to Gaza, which now faces famine and the collapse of medical care. But Netanyahu has paid no price for thumbing his nose at the nation that's been Israel's main defender, financial backer and arms supplier for a half-century. Quite the opposite.

On the same day as the World Central Kitchen bloodbath, Biden's State Department reportedly authorized the transfer to Israel of thousands more bombs that Congress had approved long before the war against Hamas. The administration is now pressing Congress to approve the sale of F-15 fighter jets. The weaponry wouldn't arrive in Israel for years, but that prospect means Netanyahu can wage war now knowing more materiel is in the pipeline.

When the U.S. sells Israel weapons, it does so without conditions; it is the only U.S. ally to get such a deal, and Biden could modify that immediately.

Only a day before Biden's phone call with Netanyahu, national security spokesperson John F. Kirby told reporters the administration was planning no change in its support of Israel. But afterward, Kirby and Secretary of State Antony J. Blinken publicly echoed Biden's new message. As Blinken put it, "If we don't see the changes that we need to see, there'll be changes in our own policy."

We're left to wait and see. Martin Indyk, a former Middle East envoy and U.S. ambassador to Israel, predicted we won't wait long. If Netanyahu doesn't soon make some "dramatic moves," he said, "Biden will be required by his own rhetoric to take sanctions."

Note that Indyk said "dramatic moves." That doesn't describe Israel's initial steps. On Friday, Netanyahu's war Cabinet agreed to temporarily open a single new crossing for aid into northern Gaza and to use an Israeli port, Ashdod, to receive assistance. And the Israeli Defense Forces dismissed two officers for the attack on the aid convoy.

Biden, who fully two months ago said Israel's military response to Oct. 7 was "over the top," should not accept Band-Aid measures as compliance. As Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security advisor, wrote, "Bibi obviously doesn't care what the U.S. says, it's about what the U.S. does."

The Trump tax cuts were neither panacea nor rip-off

Back in 2017, the debate around President Donald Trump's tax cuts was a case study in how quickly a discussion around legitimate policy can descend into partisan nonsense. On one side, Republicans spouted unfounded claims that the tax cuts would pay for themselves. On the other, Democrats spouted equally unfounded claims that only big business and the wealthy would benefit.

As usual, the truth landed somewhere in the middle. No, the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017 didn't pay for itself but at this moment reversing the marquee part of the legislation—lower tax rates for companies—to help narrow the bulging budget deficit is the last thing we should do. And while the cuts yielded benefits to Americans up and down the income scale, the benefits could best be described as modest.

Understanding what the legislation did and didn't do is relevant now because they expire in 2025, and whoever wins this year's presidential election will have to decide whether to extend them. What's not in dispute is that the act represented the most sweeping overhaul of the tax system since the Reagan administration. For businesses, it aimed to spur capital spending by slashing the corporate tax from 35% to 21%. For individuals, it lowered rates across the board and simplified the code by limiting itemized deductions, increasing the standard deduction taken by those who don't itemize and expanding access to the child tax credit.

The problem now is that largely because of fiscal spending to support the economy through the pandemic, the federal budget deficit has expanded to 6.44% of gross domestic product from 4.67% at the end of 2019, which at the time was the biggest shortfall since 2013. Also, the cost of servicing the deficit by borrowing has soared along with benchmark interest rates the last two years. For this reason alone, it's possible some, but not all, the cuts will reverse. But which ones? Whatever is decided, the corporate cuts are probably the last thing we want to repeat.

Despite the insistence of Republicans, who point to the rise in federal revenue following 2017, we can't shrink the deficit by further reducing taxes. In 2022, federal revenue came in at $4.9 trillion, far higher than the $4.2 trillion predicted by the bi-partisan Congressional Budget Office before the tax cuts. Two factors are responsible for the outperformance. One, capital gains tax revenue jumped following the stock market's big rally in 2020 and 2021. Two, a worker shortage during the pandemic caused wages to rise by almost 5% over the course of 2021. Higher wages not only led to higher incomes but also pushed many Americans into higher tax brackets, thereby increasing revenue.

Democrats have described the tax cuts as only benefiting the wealthy. This is also a gross distortion of the facts. Between 2017 and 2019, taxpayers at both the bottom and top of the income scale saw their average tax rate decline by a little less than 1%. Those in between saw more significant reductions, with the upper middle class—defined as those making $200,000 to $500,000 a year—seeing their tax rates decline by 2.5%. This reflects the fact that many of them are small business owners who, along with big corporations, received additional tax cuts designed to encourage economic growth.

In theory, cutting taxes on businesses encourages them to expand production because it increases their after-tax profit margins. Hence, companies are more willing to hire workers and invest in new technology or equipment to boost sales, spurring economic growth.

In practice, many Democrats and even some Republicans were concerned that businesses would use those higher profits to fund stock buybacks or higher dividend payouts to investors. Indeed, buybacks did increase sharply after 2017. For example, Apple Inc. doubled stock buybacks as its investment in the US declined. That was a bad look, but it doesn't necessarily mean tax cuts didn't work. If there had been none, Apple might have decided to decrease investment even more to fund stock buybacks.

Teasing out precisely what effect the Trump tax cuts had on a particular company's investment decisions requires a deep dive into financial and tax records. Four economists from Harvard University, Princeton University, the University of Chicago and the US Treasury Department conducted a detailed analysis of more than 12,000 companies. The results released last month found that companies which experienced larger increases in their return on investment as a result of the tax cut, boosted their investment spending by larger amounts.

With their results, the economists calculated the effect lower tax rates had on the broad economy. Their estimates show that from 2018 to 2023, the Trump tax cuts raised annual investment by a little more than 7%. That equates to an additional $265 billion in private investment in 2023. They also estimated that increased business investment raised the average worker's wages by about 1%—an income boost roughly equal to what millions of Americans got directly from the tax cuts. Yet, the corporate tax cuts cost $450 billion in the form of decreased federal revenue, compared with $1.1 trillion for individual tax cuts.

The Trump tax cuts were neither an economic panacea nor a rip-off. They produced a modest but meaningful increase in income for working Americans, both by reducing their tax burdens and increasing their wages. Lawmakers should keep this in the front of their minds as they debate how much, if any, of those tax cuts to keep.

BIDEN

bates, Biden is steeped in this nation's tradition of bipartisan, unwavering support for Israel, even though he's experienced firsthand Netanyahu's proclivity for driving a wedge between our two political parties and humiliating American presidents, especially Democrats.

President Clinton famously groused after being lectured by Netanyahu, "Who the f—does he think he is? Who's the f—superpower here?" In 2015, Netanyahu brazenly addressed Congress at House Republicans' invitation to oppose Obama's multinational nuclear agreement with Iran. And five years earlier, Biden was Netanyahu's victim, when Israel authorized new settlements in the West Bank, in violation of U.S. and international policy, just as the then-vice president arrived in Israel for an official visit.

It's an open secret that Netanyahu would like his fellow right-wing narcissist Donald Trump to return to power; he justifiably assumes Trump would give him carte blanche in Gaza. To that end, Netanyahu welcomes the erosion of Biden's support among Arab Americans and young voters because of the president's backing for Israel.

Biden knows this, yet his support for Israel overrides his domestic political calculations. He also knows, however, that Netanyahu's policies are not in Israel's best interests, or the United States'. He can take actions without waiting for Netanyahu's responses. Such as shelving for now the pending arms transfer and jet sales, or at a minimum, putting strict conditions on their use, as some senators have begun seeking. And getting Netanyahu's assurance that Rafah won't be razed and refugees there displaced yet again.

On Friday, Blinken said "the real test is results" in increased aid to Gaza. That's essential but insufficient. If that's all Thursday's call accomplishes, it's not enough.

work in this way. The aim of such proposals isn't to replace private insurance, as some "single payer" schemes envisage, or to regulate some private offerings more tightly state by state (as in Colorado's plan), but to broaden access to affordable choices.

However conceived, public options will face setbacks. Healthcare reform is administratively demanding and politically fraught. Absent rules compelling participation, hospitals and providers could refuse to see patients if reimbursement rates fall too low, leaving areas with less coverage and weaker competition. Nobody says this will be easy.

Yet the existing system is undeniably failing. In poll after poll, Americans say rising health-care costs are a top concern. States should keep on trying new approaches to see what works. And Washington should put the Medicare-based public option—perhaps the most promising way to solve the system's biggest problems—back on the agenda.

NMTech training new workers for baking, cosmetology fields

chrystal_marino@saipantribune.com
CORRESPONDENT

The furnace is hot at the Northern Marianas Technical Institute as it continues to train the next professionals in the CNMI.

With 30 individuals participating in baking/pastry and cosmetology courses alone, they are well on their way to fill some of the high-demand jobs in the Commonwealth, and as of this week, the second cohort in these courses are getting ready to complete their classes.

NMTech outreach coordinator Ben Babauta Jr. is happy to report that the first group of cohorts in baking/pastry and cosmetology are in the middle of internships in hotels and salons on Saipan and the second group is about to complete their class this May.

"Last August, we launched the first baking/pastry cohort and the first cosmetology cohort. It's the first time NMTech is offering these programs. It started in August and it finished in mid-December. We had six students enrolled in that class."

Spearheaded by Le Cordon Bleu-certified chef Marissa Camacho, baking/pastry students learned the fundamentals of baking and food décor. Starting from safety and sanitation, to food science and measurements, and then more hands-on execution like baking in two parts, to making fresh bread, students were able to utilize different techniques to create different types of bread as well as make cookies, muffins, and cakes with a bit of garnishing and decorating thrown in the mix.

Babauta said the first cohort is currently on its 240-hour internship at Hyatt Regency Saipan, Aqua Resort Club, and Pacific Islands Club Saipan.

The second baking/pastry cohort that started in January has nine students and are expected to finish the program by the end of May.

"We have an additional five students right now for the mid-spring semester. So, a total of about 20 are undergoing training in less than a year."

In cosmetology, Babauta also has seen piqued interest in participants and their first cohort of six students that started in August 2023 finished the program last week.

The cosmetology students gained knowledge that covered safety and sanitation, hair proportion, differences between types of hair, color theory, and how to cut hair.

Taught by instructors Kurt Ellis, Moriah Sablan, and Kristin Hofschneider, the classes also delved into the basics of nail care from manicures and pedicures to a little bit about hand massage and even dermatology. Specifically, they learned about the safety and sanitation of skin and understanding the different diseases and how to carefully clean skin. Babauta said students will get additional training by having their internship at Salt & Barber.

"Everything we're doing for both the cosmetology and baking/pastry program is for a reason. It is because we saw the immense need shown on the Department of Labor's job vacancy announcements," said Babauta.

He hopes that through these courses and students developing these trades, there will be enough U.S. or long-term resident workers to fill the void when contract workers eventually leave the CNMI with the expiration of the CW program in 2029.

The awards—selected by popular vote—were presented during Marine Diving Fair in Tokyo, Japan, held April 5-7, where the Marianas Visitors Authority reached out to the nearly 29,000 attendees to promote diving and other attractions of the Marianas.

The Marianas—including Saipan, Tinian, and Rota—was voted #2 Best Diving Area-Overseas in the Marine Diving Awards on April 5, 2024. The awards were presented at Marine Diving Fair in Tokyo, Japan, held on April 5-7, where the Marianas Visitors Authority reached out to tens of thousands of attendees to promote diving and other attractions of the Marianas.

This year MVA hosted two information booths at the event, held on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday (April 5-7), at Ikebukuro Sunshine City.

“As diving is one of our biggest attractions in the Marianas, the Marine Diving Fair has been a part of the MVA’s annual promotions calendar for many years, and we are humbled that Japanese divers continue to consider our islands one of the best places to dive overseas,” said MVA managing director Christopher A. Concepcion. “It shows that as a diving destination, The Marianas holds its own alongside countries like Palau, the Philippines, Tahiti, Fiji, and others. This is an encouragement for the government, business sector, and community to keep up our efforts to preserve and protect our diving sites and ensure our visiting divers have a safe and memorable experience.”

Joining MVA staff in promoting the Marianas were representatives of several dive shops: Miyuki Ishihara of Dive House ANCLAH, Tomoe Yoshida of Bigeye, and Noriko Akari and Yumiko Tanaka of Sakura Marine. In addition to sharing information about diving and other visitor opportunities in The Marianas, the MVA promoted flight services to Saipan from Tokyo by United Airlines and conducted a survey among participants.

As self-reported upon arrival to the Marianas last fiscal year, nearly 1,000 individuals and families to The Marianas indicated their intention to dive. The 33rd Marine Diving Fair is scheduled for April 4-6, 2025. (PR)

'Why we serve as public school vice principals'

From working alongside the school principal to helping coach teachers, supporting students learn, and responding to every parent's needs, school vice principals do a lot of work that makes up the main chunk of their time as "support system of the school."

For these reasons and more "why," these professional educators serve the Public School System and all its stakeholders. They all shared their experiences during the April 8 professional learning opportunity that culminated in the week-long Public School System Vice Principals Week. The event was held at the Kensington Hotel Saipan last Monday.

These vice principals acknowledge that impacting one child at a time in various ways makes a huge difference.

There are 23 vice principals from all 20 elementary, middle, and high school campuses on Rota, Tinian, and Saipan.

On Monday, Board of Education chair Herman Atalig, Education Commissioner Dr. Lawrence F. Camacho, associate commissioner for Administration Eric Magofna, Special Education State director Donna M. Flores, Federal Programs officer Jacqueline P. Che, Finance and Budget director Arlene Lizama, Human Resources officer Lucretia Deleon Guerrero, Information Technology and Distance Education director Lorraine Catienza, and Senior directors Dr. Rizalina Liwag, and Dr. Yvonne R. Pangelinan, among others, celebrated with the district's vice principals.

The school district's vice principals are: Carla A. Sablan, Chacha Oceanview Middle School; Reo A. Arriola, Dandan Middle School; Catherine A. Acera-Cabrera, Francisco M. Sablan Middle School; Melisa D. Mendes, Gregorio T. Camacho Elementary School; Jaclyn Rose A. Quitugua, Garapan Elementary School; Karen Anna Alla Manuel and Benjamin B. Seman, Hopwood Middle School; Lareyna N. Camacho, Kagman Elementary School; Francisca C. Bondoc and Shirley-Jean L. Norita, Kagman High School; Jonas M. Barcina, Koblerville Elementary School; Preston O. Basa, Andrew L. Orsini II, and Melanie Sablan Rdiall, Marianas High School; Alisa Ann T. Pangelinan, Oleai Elementary School; Arisa Sakai, Saipan Southern High School; Annamarie S. Guerrero, San Vicente Elementary School; Juana Atalig, Sinapalo Elementary School, Felisa b. Tellu, Tanapag Middle School; April Manglona, Tinian Elementary School, Edward M. Hofsneider, Tinian Middle/

Board of Education chair Herman Atalig gestures as he praises all of PSS school vice principals for their hard work and commitment.

"Why do I serve? It helps me make a difference in the community," said MHS vice principal Romolo Andrew Orsini.

Preston Basa, another MHS vice principal, said: "It's for the students. I know that what we provide our students will impact their overall education."

Vice principal Melanie Sablan Rdiall is proud to serve MHS for the last five years. "I have 1,600-plus reasons for why I served. I don't see myself going anywhere in the next 100 years."

Chacha Oceanview Middle School vice principal Carla Sablan said, "I have been with PSS for 22 years and I still find it rewarding... seeing students every day, supporting our teachers and families. And over the years, our students come back to us to thank us. That's my 'why'. This is why I love my job like everybody here."

Tinian Elementary School vice principal April Manglona

has been on the job for only eight months. "It is sometimes overwhelming, but what makes our job easier is the good support system that I have. And I thank (principal) Lou Connie Manglona for being a great support system."

Rota's Sinapalo Elementary School vice principal Juana Atalig is proud to serve because of the school system. "Because I am a product of the Head Start Program, my son is in the special education program, and my family has been given support by the Public School System. Without the amazing system in my life, I would not be an amazing support in our school. That's why I am amazing."

Garapan Elementary School vice principal Jaclyn Rose Quitugua said: "The reason why I get up in the morning is to be with my students and my colleagues—our school staff."

She paid tribute to her parents, current senior director for Curriculum and Instruction Jackie A. Quitugua and former associate commissioner Justo Quitugua. "I grew up in the (education) system. I was at my parents' office almost every day when I was young, and it was fitting to follow their steps."

Francisco M. Sablan Middle School vice principal Catherine Acera-Cabrera was "challenged" to join the team. "It helped me move mountains... for the future of our children, for their success, and for them to become life-long learners."

One of the longest serving vice principals, Arisa Sakai of SSHS, finds it rewarding: "I have been a classroom teacher for 17 years, and I'm always there to support everyone. I'm the cheerleader, the second mom to our high school students."

Kagman High School vice principal Francisca Castro finds it exciting to work every day. "Every day there's something different. That's why I enjoy what I'm doing."

Oleai Elementary School vice principal Alisa Ann T. Pangelinan said: "My why is why not? Every day and everything that we do for our families... is for our children. What we do at home as parents, we help build our school as educators."

For the last 16 years as an educator, vice principal Annamarie S. Guerrero is proud of being part of the San Vicente Elementary School community. "I have been the 'Robin to Batman.' I'm the Robin in my school. I'm their support but it's not about me; it's about us all and what we do for our schools."

For Kagman Elementary School vice principal Lareyna

In appreciation to their work, Education Commissioner Dr. Lawrence F. Camacho and the school district presented all school vice principals with tokens of appreciation. In this photo, the education chief is flanked by vice principals Dr. Ben Seman, Karen A. Manuel, Catherine Cabrera, Carla Sablan, Feliza Tellu, and Ed Hofsneider.

Vice principals Ana Guerrero, Alisa Pangelinan, Francisca Bondoc, and Arisa Sakai try to solve a word game bingo activity. Several enrichment activities were presented during last Monday's professional development for all school vice principals.

"Loling" Camacho, the opportunity came knocking. "Like my colleagues said, it's hard work: we do what we do to serve our community."

Tanapag Middle School vice principal Feliza Brel Tellu said it's the "passion" that gets her going.

Hopwood Middle School vice principal Karen Ann A. Manuel said nothing surpasses being in the service of students." I have had several jobs but nothing tops being in the school. Every day, you come across different life stories, get to know students...it's just really amazing that I'm in the school and there is kind of an impact, whether it's 1,500 or 1,500 lives."

Another Hopwood vice principal, Dr. Ben Seman, said: "We're all about supporting each other. What I do is about my passion to serve."

The newest vice principal, Ed Hofsneider of Tinian Jr. Sr. High School added: "We look after our students. With everything that we do, we give them support."

Dandan Middle School vice principal Reo Arriola has served the school for 14 years. "The reason why I continue to give my all is the opportunity that it provides me: to offer support to my school."

Koblerville Elementary School vice principal Jonas M. Barcina has worn many hats, but what endeavors him to continue serving for the last 34 years is to serve. "I am the first of my siblings to attend and finish college, and I said to myself after graduating college, I will be the one to do it to help my family, and the community. That's why I did it: It's about believing that we can do it."

He added: "That is why I serve our school district, because I believe in what our students can do, what our teachers can offer, and what we all, as advocates and leaders can do." (PR)

It's one of those hidden gems on island and whether you're looking for something salty, sweet, cold, or hot, or even a friendly hello, Ben-Ki Store in Dandan is definitely a must stop if you're in the area.

Snuggly situated in upper Dandan right next to Lucky De Mart Laundry, this mom-and-pop store is one of few remaining locally owned and family run stores on Saipan.

Ben-Ki Store itself not only carries regular grocery items, but it also markets a taste of their family recipes with hot lunches, empanadas, breads, local chips, asiga and bishu.

Another big seller for the store is their side fish market where they sell reef fish, octopus, and other bounties of the sea caught by their very own fishermen.

With the hot weather, Ben-Ki Store also has become a hub for young and old as they are the only ones selling soft-serve ice cream in the area.

But one of the main things that make Ben-Ki Store a gem is the fact that it's 100% locally owned and almost 100% family run and when you walk into the store you are sure to be warmly greeted by one of the members of the Teregeyo family.

Whether owners Marianne Concepcion-Teregeyo, her son Raymond, or her 4-year-old granddaughter, Rayarah, at the counter, you can feel the sense of family at Ben-Ki Store.

Concepcion-Teregeyo shared that the store got its name from her parents, Ben and Ki Concepcion, who had a store themselves in the 1990s. She said her parents always had a business and aside from the store, they owned a marine sport company in Garapan.

As for Concepcion-Teregeyo, she had dabbled in business herself for a short time. "I operated a video store here and a pearl shake shop in the 1990s in this building. Then we left to the U.S. mainland for me to attend college. After graduating, I came back and worked in the government, and at one point became the secretary for Department of Public Lands."

She shared that as time passed, she hadn't really entertained the thought of reopening the store, but when her kids moved back to Saipan, her son expressed an interest in selling fish.

"We didn't really plan to open the store. It wasn't a longtime dream. Everything just fell into place as my kids were moving back from the mainland."

Concepcion-Teregeyo said her mother owned the building where Ben-Ki is now, but after Typhoon Soudelor it had been vacant. When her son returned home with a boat and wanted to sell fish, it seemed to all fall into place and in 2022 Ben-Ki Store finally opened.

Then things began to branch out from there as her daughter began making and selling asiga mixes and bishu candies and her son also started a small farm where they harvest produce to sell. Concepcion-Teregeyo shared that after a while they began incorporating products from a number of other local farmers and fishermen who asked to sell their products at the store. Eventually their motto became "Locals Helping Locals."

"Local farmers also bring their stuff here, but since the terpersonal and money skills. "It really touches me."

She said because of their popular lunch plates, breakfast and lunch hours are the busiest for the store.

"Breakfast and lunch keep us really busy. We close early because it's not busy at night but we hope to be. We hope to have more customers at night."

And the community seems to be in agreement.

"I like their local food," said Koblerville resident Roland Sablan.

Meanwhile, Shirleyann Salomon said she first knew of Ben-Ki Store when she lived in Dandan and although she moved to Koblerville, she would still stop by. What keeps her from coming back are the various seafood available and, of course, the soft-serve ice cream.

As Ben-Ki Store marks its second year, Concepcion-Teregeyo hopes to reach even more people and share what they have to offer.

"I encourage other locals to send a private message to us if they are interested in selling their products. We can provide counter, shelf, or chiller space but they must have the proper documents especially for food handling."

Ben-Ki Store opens bright and early at 6:30am and closes at 7:30pm everyday. For more information, call (670) 288-6664 or message them through their Facebook page.

Chamber extends island hospitality to Air Force personnel during Agile Reaper 2024 Exercise

The Saipan Chamber of Commerce extends its warmest hospitality to the visiting men and women in uniform participating in the Agile Reaper 2024 exercise, organized by the 3rd Expeditionary Wing under the U.S. Pacific Air Forces command. On Tuesday, April 9, at 5:30pm, approximately 130 personnel were greeted with a special gesture of appreciation at the Airport Field, located across the American Red Cross-NMI Chapter office.

"This was a great opportunity for our Chamber team to show some island hospitality to our visiting men and women in uniform," said Armed Forces Committee chair Brad Ruzsala. "These fine men and women will not forget our hospitality, and we won't forget their service to our nation."

The meal preparations, spearheaded by AFC member Glenna Sakisat-Palacios, saw the collaboration of several local businesses and organizations to provide a hot meal experience for the participating personnel. AFC member Catherine Attao-Toves coordinated the Tan Siu Lin Foundation's sponsorship of the meals through Shirley's Coffee Shop, while AFC member John Hirsh facilitated the provision of serving tables through the American Red Cross-NMI Chapter.

"One nice hot meal might not seem like a big deal, but it sure is something special when you're training in a far-off place and you're limited to a steady diet of MREs for two and a half weeks," said Ruzsala.

The Chamber extends its sincere appreciation to the generous sponsors of the meals, including Triple J Saipan, Tan Holdings, Shirley's Coffee Shop, Marianas Integration, TurnKey Solutions, and the American Red Cross-NMI Chapter. Their support and contribution towards this initiative are invaluable, reflecting their commitment to supporting the AFC's mission which is to connect military-affiliated partners, veterans, and active-duty service-men and women with the business community through various community and business activities.

Starting from April 3, members of the U.S. Air Force have been conducting their annual Agile Reaper exercise on Saipan and Tinian. According to the Commonwealth Ports Authority, approximately 150 U.S. Air Force personnel are stationed on Saipan, utilizing half of the Saipan airport field for their campgrounds. CPA assistant operations supervisor Zachary Reyes assures the community that the exercises, expected to occur until April 15, are routine and should not raise concerns among residents.

For more information and updates on the Agile Reaper 2024 exercise, stay tuned to announcements from the CPA. (PR)

Warner Bros. teases 'Joker' sequel, 'Beetlejuice 2' and more at CinemaCon

LAS VEGAS (AP)—Warner Bros. isn't resting on its "Barbie" laurels: The 100-year studio has its sights on a record-breaking 2024 as well, with a release slate that includes a new Mad Max film, "Furiosa," Kevin Costner's two-part Western epic, "Horizon: An American Saga," the "Beetlejuice" sequel, and "Jok-er: Folie à Deux," which brings Lady Gaga to Gotham City.

The studio was first up Tuesday night to dazzle theater owners who are gathered this week in Las Vegas for the annual CinemaCon convention and trade show. They came armed with stars, including the likes of Kevin Costner, Michael Keaton, Robert Pattinson, Anya Taylor-Joy and Chris Hemsworth, as well as footage and trailers to show.

"Joker" director Todd Phillips showed the audience a trailer for "Joker: Folie à Deux," out Oct. 4, which brings Joaquin Phoenix back as the violent and mentally ill Arthur Fleck and introduces Gaga's Harley Quinn. Phillips thanked the exhibitors in the room for helping the first movie become such a big success.

Addressing rumors that the sequel is a musical, Phillips said that he hasn't referred to it as such.

"It's a movie where music is an essential element," Phillips said. "To me that doesn't veer very far from the first film."

Before its world premiere at the Cannes Film Festival next month and theatrical release on May 24, "Furiosa" director George Miller stars Taylor-Joy and Hemsworth, spoke a bit about the prequel and showed some explosive new footage.

"We just finished last week," said the 79-year-old filmmaker, whose first Mad Max film came out 45 years ago.

This new film is focused on a young Furiosa, who was played by Charlize Theron in "Mad Max: Fury Road," the 2015 blockbuster that made over $300 million at the box office and won four Oscars.

"This is the story of one woman's relentless commitment to impossible hope," Taylor-Joy said. "We see her go through everything."

Hemsworth plays a warlord named "Dementus."

The audience was especially excited to hear from Kevin Costner, who will be back in theaters this summer with a two-part Western, "Horizon: An American Saga," which he directed, co-wrote and stars in. Set during the Civil War, Costner wanted to look at the idea of the promise of America.

"It was the promise that if you could come west, if you could survive it, you could make a home at the expense of a lot of things," Costner said. "To me, that's drama."

The film is getting an unconventional release, with "Part 1" hitting theaters on June 28 followed by "Part 2" on Aug. 16. The ensemble includes Sienna Miller, Sam

Worthington, Danny Huston and "Stranger Things" breakout Jamie Campbell Bower.

"A lot of people like plot movies," Costner said. "I have a tendency to like journey movies."

"Horizon: An American Saga" will premiere at Cannes next month as well.

Tim Burton was also on hand to hype "Beetlejuice Beetlejuice," the sequel to his 1988 hit, which brings back Keaton, Winona Ryder and Catherine O'Hara to reprise their roles, and introduces new characters played by Jenna Ortega, Monica Bellucci, Willem Dafoe and Justin Theroux. It opens in theaters on Sept. 5.

Burton said he always related to Lydia Deetz and wanted to know what happened to the Deetz women over the years and was happy that Ryder, O'Hara and Keaton were on board too.

"It was like a weird family reunion," Burton said.

When are the 2025 Oscars? The Academy Awards announce date, sticking to early start

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The 97th Academy Awards will be held March 2, the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences announced Wednesday.

That moves the annual ceremony up about a week. This year's Oscars were held on March 10. The telecast, which culminated in the best picture win for Christopher Nolan's "Oppenheimer," was watched by an estimated 19.5 million people, up about 4% from the year prior.

The film academy is also sticking with an earlier start for the awards. Like this year's show, the Oscars will kick off at 7 p.m. Eastern, an hour earlier than they have typically done. ABC will again air the Academy Awards.

The Golden Globes, after signing a new five-year deal with CBS, recently set Jan. 5 as the date for next year's ceremony.

Jessica Alba steps down as chief creative officer at Honest, personal care company she founded

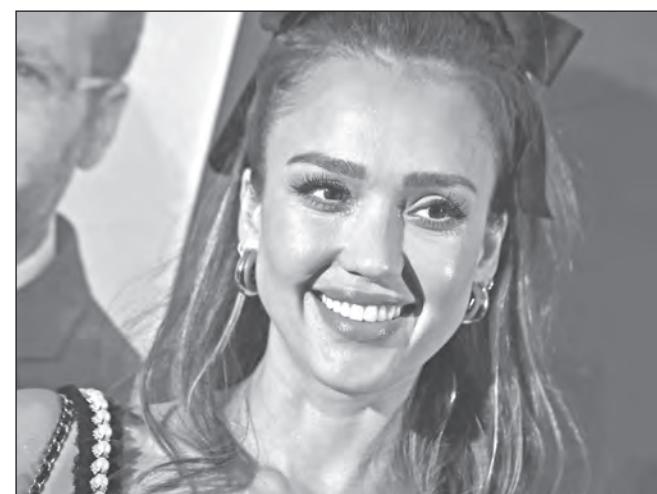

Jessica Alba, who shot to fame in the James Cameron television series "Dark Angel," as well as films such as "Sin City" and the "Fantastic Four," will step down as chief creative officer at Honest Company, a personal care company that she founded.

Alba will keep a seat on the company board, but Honest said that she will now focus on "new endeavors."

The actress founded Honest in 2012 after she suffered allergic reactions to baby laundry detergents. The company went public in May 2021, with shares soaring 44% in their stock market debut.

Sales at Honest Co. have risen steadily, but the company has struggled to turn a profit. Late Thursday, the company put up its first profitable quarter since mid 2021.

"Honest has been a true labor of love for me—one that showed me what's possible when you infuse purpose into business," Alba said in a prepared statement.

Alba had early starring roles in Nickelodeon's series "The Secret World of Alex Mack," as well as the revival of the 1960s television series "Flipper."

Shares of Honest Co., based in Los Angeles, fell slightly before the opening bell Wednesday. (AP)

New mother refuses to let her grandma hold the baby

DEAR ABBY: My oldest daughter, "Kate," is 22. Her baby is now 6 months old. She is the first grandchild and great-grandchild. Kate refuses to allow my mom to hold her baby. My mom has held the baby a couple of times, but my daughter immediately swooped in and took the baby from her. During the last family gathering, Kate wouldn't let me hold the baby either, because she said I might let my mom hold the baby.

It hurts my heart to watch Mom treated this way. I know my mom. We haven't always been close, and sometimes Mom says the wrong things, but she is a good person and would never hurt the baby. Because I let Kate know my feelings, she is now refusing to come to any family gathering where Mom might be present, and she won't talk to me, either.

I'm struggling and emotional over this. Mom has done some very kind things for my daughter. She owns a timeshare and let Kate use it for graduation and her honeymoon. I feel Kate is using the baby as a weapon. Is there anything I can do? If not, how do I try to move on?

THWARTED IN UTAH

DEAR THWARTED: Kate may—or may not—be using her child as a weapon to punish you and your mother for some perceived slight. She may also legitimately be worried that her grandmother might accidentally drop the little one. You stated that you and your mother weren't close for a period of time. If you and your mother weren't close, it would follow that your daughter wouldn't be all that close to her grandmother.

Of course, a solution to this problem won't be possible until you understand what has caused it, and that won't happen until your daughter is willing to give you some straight answers. Start there. If she refuses, you will have to live your life and hope that as your grandchild grows up, the dynamic will change.

DEAR ABBY: When a daughter is getting married, how do divorced parents sit, walk down the aisle and conduct themselves?

ALMOST THERE IN NEW YORK

DEAR ALMOST THERE: First and foremost, the divorced parents should act like adults and bury their hostilities (if there are any) on their daughter's special day. Tact and diplomacy should be paramount. Depending upon the circumstances, the "person of choice" should accompany the bride down the aisle. If there is a step-father, some brides ask each gentleman to walk halfway down the aisle with her.

If the parents are cordial, Emily Post says they can share the first row. If they aren't (and I am shortening this), the mother sits in the front row with her relatives behind her. The father and his relatives are seated behind his ex-wife's family. (If the bride is estranged from her mother, the father and his family occupy the first rows.)

Cavaliers move closer to playoff spot beating Grizzlies

CLEVELAND
(AP)—Donovan Mitchell scored 29 points, Jarrett Allen had 16 points and 10 rebounds and the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Memphis Grizzlies 110-98 on Wednesday night to move within a victory of wrapping up a playoff spot.

All-Star shooting guard Mitchell, who has been bothered by left knee soreness for two months, also had eight assists in just his 10th game since Feb. 15. The Cavaliers have lost 11 of their last 17, but sit fourth in the Eastern Conference.

Cleveland would lock up a top-six finish and its second straight playoff appearance with a victory Friday night over Indiana or a win Sunday over Charlotte. Both games are at home.

Jake LaRavia scored a career-high 32 and made eight 3-pointers, and GG Jackson II had 22 points for injury-plagued Memphis, which has used an NBA-record 33 players this season. Scotty Pippen Jr. added 18 points and six assists.

beat Atlanta to spoil Hawks star Trae Young's return from a finger injury.

After missing 23 games because of a torn ligament in his left pinkie, Young had 14 points and 11 assists in 21 minutes while making each of his five shots from the field. He didn't play in the fourth quarter.

Brandon Miller led the Hornets with 27 points.

Bridges had 18.

Bogdan Bogdanovic and Vit Krejci each had 19 points for Atlanta, which suffered its fourth straight loss. Trent Forrest missed a last-second jumper

Silver says gambling probe of Toronto's Jontay Porter could lead to banishment from league

NEW YORK (AP)—Toronto's Jontay Porter could face expulsion from the league if the gambling-related accusations against him are found to be true, NBA Commissioner Adam Silver said Wednesday.

Silver, speaking after a two-day meeting of the league's Board of Governors, did not reveal any specifics about the investigation surrounding Porter, other than saying the probe is ongoing. Porter has not played since the league said it was looking into betting patterns surrounding his on-court performance.

"I have enormous range of discipline available to me," Silver said. "It's cardinal sin what he's accused of in the NBA. The ultimate extreme option I have is to ban him from the game. That's the level of authority I have here because there's nothing more serious."

ESPN first reported the investigation, which it said surrounded Porter's performance in games on Jan. 26 and March 20. In both of those games, Porter played briefly before leaving citing injury or illness—and did not come close to the numbers that were offered to bettors as prop wagers in those contests. That means those who basically bet against Porter would have cashed in, because he left those games before reaching the lines set by sportsbooks for his points and rebounds in those contests. Some sportsbooks have said they were alerted to odd betting patterns surrounding the Porter prop offerings in those games, which means it's likely that the league—which has business relationships with many wagering companies—may have received some of that same information.

"I mean, this is not new that there's unsavory behavior, even illegal behavior, around sports betting," Silver said. "I guess my point is that to the extent it's going to exist, if you have a regulated environment, you're going to have a better chance of detecting it than you would if all the bets were placed illegally."

Porter was listed as out, with the team citing personal reasons, for the 10th consecutive game on Wednesday with the Raptors in Brooklyn to take on the Nets. The Raptors finish the season with games at Miami on Friday and Sunday. Porter's absence started almost simultaneously to the revelation that the NBA was probing the betting patterns surrounding his games.

Other items from Silver's news conference:

TIMBERWOLVES SALE

Silver said he didn't expect the NBA to have a role in the dispute over the proposed ownership transfer of the Minnesota Timberwolves from Glen Taylor to former Major League Baseball star Alex Rodriguez and Marc Lore, but may have to reconsider if it would allow a similar sales process in the future.

Taylor said last month the duo hadn't met all of the deadlines for the condition of the sale and that he was no longer selling. Lore and Rodriguez, who already own about a 40% stake, had agreed to the purchase nearly three years ago. They bought about 20% of the franchise in 2021 and another portion of around 20% in 2023.

Silver said part of the sale structure was necessitated because the deal was struck in the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic.

"I think let's wait to see how this one works out, but it's certainly not ideal to have a stepped transaction like this," Silver said. "It met our rules from that standpoint, and it's what Glen Taylor wanted and it's what they were willing to agree to at the time. But I think once the dust clears on this deal, it may cause us to reassess what sort of transactions we should allow."

FOUL CALLS

Silver said foul calls dropped by about four per game later in the season after a series of high-scoring games in the first half. A night after the Boston Celtics became the first team in NBA history to attempt no free throws and combined with the Milwaukee Bucks for a record-low two attempts in a game, Silver said the league likes the way the games look now.

"I think there was a sense earlier in the season that there was too much of an advantage for the offensive players, whether—I think Steve Kerr said offensive players were using themselves as projectiles or hunting for fouls, however you want to call it. So that was a point of emphasis on behalf of the league," Silver said.

"So yes, there was a bit of an adjustment made along the way. But again, the context is two fouls per team per game, and the end result, most importantly, we think is a better game."

EXPANSION

Silver reiterated that the NBA won't move forward with any expansion plans until it has completed its new media rights deals. The league is currently in an exclusive negotiating period with its two main partners, the Disney Company and Warner Bros. Discovery, and he said talks had been positive.

Seattle and Las Vegas have long been speculated as the cities that will get teams when the league grows beyond its current 30 teams. But Silver said all prospective buyers have been told the league isn't ready yet.

"There aren't private conversations happening right now," Silver said. "No one has an inside track to getting a deal done, that at the time we will, with our committee, look at the cities that are interested, talk to the groups that are interested and then go from there."

as the Hawks, 10th in the Eastern Conference, missed an opportunity to move within a half-game of No. 9 Chicago in the race for a home game to open the play-in tournament.

MAVERICKS 111, HEAT 92

MIAMI (AP)—Luka Doncic scored 29 points, Kyrie Irving added 25 and Dallas wrapped up the Southwest Division title by beating Miami.

Doncic also had nine rebounds and nine assists for Dallas, which will face the Los Angeles Clippers in the first round of the Western Conference playoffs—that series starting either April 20 or 21. It'll be the third opening-round matchup between those teams in the last four seasons; the Clippers won each of the first two.

Derrick Jones Jr., P.J. Washington and Daniel Gafford all finished with 12 points for Dallas.

Tyler Herro led the Heat with 21 points. Kevin Love had 16 points and 11 rebounds, Caleb Martin scored 14 and Jimmy Butler had 12 for the Heat.

NUGGETS 116, TIMBERWOLVES 107

DENVER (AP)—Nikola Jokic scored 41 points and powered Denver past Minnesota and into sole possession of first place in the tight Western Conference playoff race with a win over the Timberwolves.

Jokic made 16 of 20 shots against the NBA's best defense while being guarded most of the night by the league's top defender, Rudy Gobert. Jamal Murray added 20 points in 27 minutes and Michael Porter Jr. scored 18.

Anthony Edwards led Minnesota with 25 points but was a non-factor in the fourth quarter as Denver pulled away. Mike Conley added 19 points for the Wolves.

The Nuggets (56-24) took a one-game lead over Minnesota and Oklahoma City, who are both 55-25. The Thunder walloped San Antonio 127-89 on Wednesday night to stay within striking distance of the West's top seed.

SUNS 124, CLIPPERS 108

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Devin Booker scored 37 points, Bradley Beal added 26 and Phoenix rallied in the fourth quarter to beat the Los Angeles Clippers.

The victory was payback for the Suns after they were embarrassed in the first quarter the previous night in Phoenix. That's when the Clippers led 35-4 and went ahead by 37 in the second quarter before the Suns got close only to lose 105-92.

The result Wednesday locked Golden State and Los Angeles Lakers into the play-in tournament. The Suns are seventh in the West, a half-game behind New Orleans for the sixth and final guaranteed playoff spot.

regular-season record.

THUNDER 127, SPURS 89

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Shai Gilgeous-Alexander scored 26 points in 26 minutes, and Oklahoma City rolled past Victor Wembanyama-less San Antonio.

Josh Giddey had 20 points, 12 rebounds and seven assists and Gordon Hayward added 18 points for the Thunder, who won their third straight and improved to 55-25 overall.

Zach Collins had 20 points and seven rebounds for the Spurs.

Wembanyama, one of the league's rising stars as a rookie, was out with an injured right ankle. Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said he was sitting Wembanyama because it was the second game of a back-to-back set and he was looking out for his star's long-term health. Popovich said before the game that the 20-year-old Wembanyama was not happy about being told to sit out.

Mariners score 5 runs in the 10th inning to beat the Blue Jays

TORONTO
(AP)—Cal Raleigh hit a two-run home run in the 10th inning and the Seattle Mariners beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1 on Wednesday to avoid a three-game sweep.

Raleigh connected on the first pitch he saw from Blue Jays left-hander Tim Mayza (0-1). The homer was Raleigh's second of the season.

Ty France hit an RBI double and Mitch Haniger added a two-run single in the five-run 10th as Seattle snapped a three-game losing streak and won for the second time in eight games.

Vladimir Guerrero Jr. hit his third home run of the season, a 459-foot solo blast, but the Blue Jays left the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth against Mariners right-hander Andrés Muñoz.

The Blue Jays managed just a pair of singles through six innings against Mariners right-hander Logan Gilbert, but erased a 1-0 deficit in the seventh when Guerrero led off with a drive into the second deck.

TWINS 3, DODGERS 2

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Edouard Julien homered twice and scored three runs for Minnesota to spark a slumping lineup and lead to a victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Julien entered the afternoon in a 3-for-28 start to the season. He led off the first and fifth innings with opposite field drives into the bleachers in left for his first career multi-homer game.

Max Muncy homered and Teoscar Hernández hit an RBI double for the Dodgers. Their opportunity to tie the game in the sixth was thwarted when Shohei Ohtani was thrown out by Carlos Correa at home to end that inning.

PHILLIES 4, CARDINALS 3

ST. LOUIS (AP)—J.T. Realmuto had two hits and scored two runs and Aaron Nola pitched six innings, leading Philadelphia to a 4-3 victory over St. Louis.

Realmuto was back in the starting lineup, hitting cleanup. He left Tuesday's game after he was hit in the throat area on a Zack Wheeler wild pitch in the seventh inning.

Brandon Marsh and Nick Castellanos each drove in a run in the sixth to break a 2-2 tie.

GIANTS 7, NATIONALS 1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Nick Ahmed and Tyler Fitzgerald had three hits apiece and Jordan Hicks allowed one run in six innings as San Francisco avoided a three-game series sweep with a 5-1 win over the Washington.

Hicks (2-0) has allowed one more runs in April for the first time since 2000.

Seth Lugo (2-0) allowed two runs and seven hits in six innings. It was the Royals' ninth quality start in 12 games, the most in the majors.

RANGERS 6, ATHLETICS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Cody Bradford struck out seven in another strong start, Adolis García had a two-run single among three hits and Texas Rangers beat Oakland, stopping a three-game losing streak.

Jonah Heim had a tiebreaking two-run single for Texas in the first inning as Oakland's three-game winning streak ended. Tyler Nevin's first-inning single had given the A's a 1-0 lead.

Bradford (3-0) allowed five hits in 6 2/3 innings, including Darel Hernández's first in the big leagues on a single in the seventh. Zack Gölöf homered leading off the eighth against Texas reliever Yerry Rodríguez.

Bradford lowered his ERA to 1.40 with wins in all three starts for the World Series champs, and lefty hitters are 0-for-27 against him going back to last September, including the post-season. He was replaced after his only walk—to left-handed No. 9 hitter Lawrence Butler.

BREWERS 7, REDS 2

CINCINNATI (AP)—Christian Yelich hit a two-run homer and Wade Miley came off the injury list to pitch four innings of one-hit ball to lift Milwaukee to a win over Cincinnati.

The 37-year-old Miley started the season on in the injury list because of pain in his throwing shoulder. He was activated before the game Wednesday and got the nod because so many of Milwaukee's top pitchers are ailing.

Miley, who threw a no-hitter when he was with the Reds in 2021, was limited to 52 pitches and allowed just a run and a hit. Bryse Wilson (1-0) pitched the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to get win.

Blake Perkins also homered for the Brewers. William Contreras singled home two as part of Milwaukee's three-run second inning, and Jackson Chourio also had two RBIs.

Reds starter Hunter Greene (0-1) allowed six earned runs and six hits through six innings. He struck out nine but allowed the homers to Yelich and Perkins.

Reds shortstop Elly De La Cruz rocketed a solo homer to left in the fifth inning that came off the bat at 110.4 mph. De La Cruz has hits in 11 of 12 games this season and has reached base in 17 consecutive games dating back to Sept. 26.

Seattle Mariners catcher Cal Raleigh (29) hits the game winning two run home run during the tenth inning of a baseball game against the Toronto Blue Jays in Toronto on Wednesday, April 10, 2024.

earned run or less in each of his first three starts this season after signing a $44 million, four-year contract with San Francisco this offseason. The 27-year-old right-hander allowed four hits and had two strikeouts.

Ahmed drove in two runs and scored three times, while Fitzgerald stole two bases and scored twice.

Joey Gallo homered for Washington, his third of the season.
